was elected w/ help of 32nd Ward Organization. They offered space currently 5 visible "organizations" left in city. in 1969 50 organ to people who do not get salaries but sometimes contribute time to get candidates elected. <sup>People now do volunteer work etc.</sup>

Ward came on district. Area now 55,000 people per Ward.

3,000,000 total population in the City of Chicago.

32nd Ward is "1/2 visible" others are 11th Ward, 19th, 14th.

Restructuring occurred and that did a lot to hurt the ward system. Few people want to switch to new ward. 32nd ward was restructured 81, 83, 86, federal ordered 91 ten year restructure as result of 10yr census. Had to hold district together with that came on.

Precinct Captain and volunteers for each precinct, not all precincts

In 1990 a captain was in place in 1987 there was political activity for DR. 32nd ward organized plant around Chamberlain to get signatures for his reelection

8-9,000 sigs to nominate Posty.

Campaign for Posty changed in 1988
when he was no longer committeeman at [redacted] so campaign changed in that regard. Action taken would depend on the strength of the opposition against Posty. 1986 - good runner, appoint and in the General Election no work was done to counter counter that. 88-90 less serious opposition to DR.

campaign mailings, going door to door,
mailings

for of every year there would be a general election 30 days before Election
October there would be registration before November election. Pre-1990 strong rules on registration.

For each person that registered an envelope with the person's name on it and a letter would be put in the envelope from DR as high as 3800, but usually 2000-2500. They would have to come to a registration poll place, get stamps for mailings from ACT

Grand Jury Told Vehicles Owned and Not Leased

By Chuck Neubauer
Staff Writer

A grand jury witness in the investigation of U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski says subpoenaed documents show a Wilmette auto dealer handled the lawmaker's acquisition of three vehicles as purchases and not as government leases, as Rostenkowski maintains.

The federal government is trying to determine if Rostenkowski illegally used $73,000 in taxpayer funds to buy the vehicles and then disguised the payments as government leases for mobile offices.

The witness was Kevin Stirtz, a former employee of Wil-Shore Motor Sales Inc., who said the company's subpoenaed files, which he examined for prosecutors, contained purchase documents and not lease contracts and worksheets.

He said the dealership's files looked to him like the transactions were "100 percent retail purchases." Stirtz was the finance manager for the dealership from October, 1992, until February, 1993.

Stirtz had no direct involvement or knowledge of the Rostenkowski transactions. Prosecutors asked him to examine the documents and explain the normal way business was done at the dealership. He is one of several former and current Wil-Shore employees to be subpoenaed.

The files did not contain such basic lease information as instructions for returning the car or purchasing it when the lease expired, he said. The only lease document he was shown was the one Rostenkowski filed with the House so that Wil-Shore would get paid.

Stirtz said he spent Monday and Tuesday in Washington, D.C., with prosecutors and grand jurors investigating how the vehicles became Rostenkowski's personal property.

The federal investigation of the vehicles began after a Jan. 24 report in the Chicago Sun-Times questioned whether Rostenkowski had improperly used his congressional expense allowance to acquire the two vans and a station wagon.

Rostenkowski has denied any wrongdoing involving the vehicles and his aides insist the vehicles were leased. He's also denied allegations in the House post office scandal that he embezzled cash through transactions disguised as stamp purchases.

Robert S. Bennett, his Washington attorney, warned Friday night that "people should withhold judgment, until all the evidence is in. . . . The congressman is entitled to due process, and trial in the press and by the press violates that."

"You should question the motives of someone who goes into the grand jury and testifies in what is essentially a secret proceeding and then calls the newspapers to report on his testimony."

U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) leaves his office on Capitol Hill Thursday. A grand jury is trying to determine if Rostenkowski illegally used $73,000 in taxpayer funds to buy three vehicles.

Witnesses before a federal grand jury are free to discuss their testimony, according to federal rules.

Beginning in February, 1987, records show Rostenkowski billed taxpayers $1,050 a month for "mobile offices," he told Congress he was leasing for two years each. They were a customized 1987 Ford Econoline van, a 1989 Ford Aerostar minivan and a 1991 Ford Taurus wagon.

The Sun-Times revealed that the $1,050 monthly payments made directly to the dealership exceeded the customary leasing cost for such vehicles. And unlike a standard lease, the cars were titled in Rostenkowski's name as soon as the payments started.

Stirtz was asked by prosecutors whether lease cars ever were put in the name of the person leasing the vehicle and he said he responded: "It is never done." He said the title is always kept in the name of the owner; in a standard lease, that would be the leasing company.

He said putting the car titles immediately in Rostenkowski's name was one of the signs the congressman was being treated as the owner and not the lessor. Rostenkowski also did not list the vehicles as leased on the title applications.

He said he was asked about one document that could indicate a lease: an insurance policy on one of the vehicles which listed Wil-Shore as a "lessee payee." Stirtz said this meant Wil-Shore would get the insurance proceeds if anything happened to the car.

Stirtz said the files showed the purchase prices of three vehicles were $25,000 for the Econoline, $21,000 for the Aerostar and $25,000 for the Taurus—close to the $25,000 taxpayers paid during each two-year lease period.

After the lease periods ended, Rostenkowski retained ownership of the Econoline van and the Aerostar minivan. He has maintained he purchased the vehicles at the end of the leases, using $9,715 in campaign funds for the van and an undisclosed amount of personal funds to purchase the minivan.

The 1989 Ford Aerostar owned by Rostenkowski. Federal investigators are studying how Rostenkowski acquired the minivan and two other vehicles. The minivan is shown parked near his home.

WHO USES MOBILE OFFICES

A mobile office makes sense for U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius. His Texas district is 34,619 square miles.

Dan Rostenkowski had one of the smallest districts in Congress in the last session; some 33 square miles. Yet for six years he charged taxpayers a hefty $1,050 a month to lease a mobile office.

Of the 23 representatives who leased a mobile office in 1991, Rostenkowski's district was the smallest, according to a USA Today and Gannett News Service study.

Other representatives lease mobile offices, like converted Winnebago mobile homes, to service constituents who live hundreds of miles from their official district offices. Rostenkowski's congressional office at the time, at 2148 N. Damen, was within 10 miles of any point in his district.

Rostenkowski has declined to discuss how he used his mobile offices—two vans and a station wagon.

In addition to his mobile offices, Rostenkowski also charges taxpayers to lease a 1988 Lincoln Continental for driving around the district.

Stirtz said he did not see any record of such payments in the files he examined.

Donald Roberts, the owner of Wil-Shore, could not be reached for comment Friday. He told the Sun-Times in the past that Rostenkowski "bought his cars from me in a normal fashion. I don't know what arrangement he has made with the government to pay for the cars."

Federal prosecutors also questioned Stirtz about when the Taurus wagon was returned to Wil-Shore.

Rostenkowski has said he returned the wagon in November, 1992, before the lease was up and before the Sun-Times began asking questions about the vehicles in December.

Prosecutors showed Stirtz a copy of the Taurus' title that Rostenkowski had signed and given to Wil-Shore. His signature was dated Nov. 13 or 16, 1992, Stirtz said.

He told prosecutors the car was returned in late December or early January after Sun-Times inquiries.

He said the day the car was returned, he saw a man who could have been Rostenkowski leaving the dealership. He said he was told later by other employees that Rostenkowski had returned the car himself that day.

All three vehicles still are in Rostenkowski's name, according to the Illinois secretary of state's office.

All three vehicles were ordered with trailer hitches and heavy-duty suspensions, Stirtz said. The Taurus had a radio installed, a remote starter and an $800 alarm system, he said.

Stirtz said he also was asked what he knew about Rostenkowski's use of campaign funds at Wil-Shore. He said he had no knowledge of those transactions.

The grand jury also appears to be trying to determine if Rostenkowski used campaign funds to acquire personal vehicles at Wil-Shore, other sources have said.

The Rostenkowski for Congress Committee paid $68,140 to Wil-Shore between 1975 and 1988. He and his family took title to many automobiles from Wil-Shore during that period.
